The Consiglio table (1991-1994) was originally designed by Aldo Rossi for his Milanese design studio on Via S. Maria alla Porta. It is a solid wood table with an elemental shape, rectangular or square.

An essential architecture that becomes “domestic” when its proportions are reduced, without losing its monumental character. The legs, square in section and with rounded edges, are set back slightly from the corners of the tabletop.

Veened entirely in American cherry wood, Consiglio, with its clean lines and structural study, allows the design of large meeting tables and fits easily in corporate and domestic ambiances.
